

BYU Hosts Publications Workshop

Sunday marked the beginning of the annual BYU High School Publications Workshop. This year, the University plays host to over 200 members of high school publications staffs, here to gain practical experience and ideas to be used in their own publications.

THE WORKSHOP began with a morning program immediately after registration Monday morning. The workshopers received their official welcome to the University from Dean Conan, president of the College of Fine Arts and Communications. Speakers at the welcome program were Earl Hale, staff writer for the Utah News and advisor to the workshop's printed newspaper.

Students attending the workshop are divided into five staffs, according to their fields of interest. To produce a daily mimeographed newspaper, one issue of a student newspaper, an eight-page section of a typical yearbook, advertising and business cards for the publications, or photographs for the publications.

During their workshop sessions, the student journalists hear from guest lecturers. Slated to speak during the week are Mark Bartonek, assistant dean of news, University of Wisconsin; R. Christensen of Addressograph-Multigraph Co., San Diego; and Utah Office Equipment.

Conner Kartchner, Taylor Publishing Co.; Hack Miller, Utah News sports editor; Lutz Heller, publications advisor at Brigham Young, Utah, High School; Robert Pavlov, publications advisor, Fort Angeles, Wis., High School.

Oliver R. Smith, chairman of the journalism department, is workshop director, assisted by M. D. Burnett and Merwin G. Banks.

SUMMER EDITION

Vol. 115, No. 175

Arena Farce Opens at Y Tuesday; Tickets Limited For Summer Show

A limited number of tickets are still available for the final summer BYU Theatre production, "See How They Run," according to Dr. Charles Metten, director. The play opens Tuesday and runs through Saturday in the Arena Theatre, C-94 ASB. Curtain time is 8:15 p.m.

TICKETS MAY BE obtained from 9:12 daily in the Joseph Smith ticket office, and at other times from the Dramatic Arts office, Studentman House. Students and faculty will be admitted upon presentation of summer activity cards. Admission price for all others is $1.00.

"See How They Run" is a fast-moving farce concerning the goings-on in the vicarage of the English village of Merton-Cum-Middlewick. The Reverend Lionel Toop, portrayed by Robert White, and his American actress-wife, Penelope, played by Connie Orr, are plagued with the constant interference of the village old maid, Miss Skillion. Mae Flegg of the Dramatic Arts faculty appears in the latter role.

WHEN A FORMER suitor of Penelope's, Corporal Elsie Winton, played by Steve Blood, appears on the scene, Miss Skillion is horrified. To complicate matters further, there is a question of mixed-up identities as Lionel Clive, a Russian spy, a visiting minister, and a bishop who happens to be Penelope's uncle, indulge in a wild chase through the house and gardens. All five are identically dressed and no one seems to be quite sure which one is the real vicar.

The spy is played by Earl Sanders, while Robert Nelson appears as the bishop and Richard Smith plays the role of the Reverend Arthur Humphrey, the visiting minister.

COMPLETING THE cast are Joan Warner as Ida, maid in the

'Voice of Poet' Set Thursday By Mae Flegg

Miss Mae Flegg will entertain on Thursday's studentbody assembly with her program entitled "Voice of the Poet." The assembly will be in the auditorium of the Joseph Smith Building Thursday at 10 a.m.

MISS FLEGG'S program, which will consist of poetic readings, covers poetry from classical to modern. Miss Flegg will read poetry of every kind from lyric to poetic drama. The authors whose poetry she will read include Robert Herrick, J. Redwood Anderson, T. S. Eliot, William Shakespeare, and Christopher Fry.

Miss Flegg will be the only person on the program. She is a part-time student, part-time faculty member, and has often given poetry recitals before BYU students. She is also costume designer for BYU summer theater productions.

THEY'RE practicing for the summer formal, titled "Gone With the Wind," to be held Saturday evening in Cannon Center. The annual affair will be from 8:30-11:30 p.m. and free to all those with student activity cards. Admission without a card will be $1.

Music for the evening will be provided by the Burgen Taylor Quintet, according to Don Tenney dance chairman. "The group plays the same style as George Shearing and Dave Brubeck," added Tenney.

CHANCES ARE YOU won't recognize Cannon Center next Saturday night, according to Carole Porter, decorations chairman. The focal point of Helaman Hall activities will be transformed into a likeness of the Tara Mansion ballroom. There will be dancing on the patio, according to Miss Porter, amid Spanish moss and weeping willows.

The dress for the dance is semi-formal and corsages are not necessary. Church standards long or short formals are in order for the women.

The Friars, a trio from Salt Lake, will furnish the entertainment by singing folk songs and southern ballads, said Mr. Tenney.

Deanne Thompson and Doug Stewart get in the mood for the coming Summer Formal by dancing in costumes of the "Gone With the Wind," the annual dance will be Saturday at 8:30 p.m. in Cannon Center.

Senior Breakfast Is Luncheon

Due to conflicting schedules, the previous plans for the Senior Breakfast have been changed to a Senior Luncheon, according to Judy Warnick, publicity chairman.

The Senior Luncheon will be held Aug. 22 at noon in the J. S. Ballroom. Miss Warnick added that everyone is invited, especially the family and friends of the graduating Seniors.

Tickets will be sold Tuesday in front of the Library and the SFIC for $1.25 each. During the rest of the week they may be purchased in the Alumni Bldg.

"There will be a speaker, but this will be announced later in the week," said Miss Warnick.

Len Beaman demonstrates the High Kick as one of the techniques to be used in Tuesday's assembly. Orchestras, U dance group, will present a Modern Dance Assembly the Joseph Smith Auditorium stage at 10 a.m. A variety of numbers will be performed.

Education Possible With Loans

Each year approximately 2500 students are helped on the way to their college degrees by the BYU Student Loan Program. Finance is a major problem for students attending college and the fund set up by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has been a blessing for many students.

TWO MAJOR programs are available to meet the individual needs of the students.

Any full-time student finding himself in need of emergency aid for tuition, books, fees and other school expenses can borrow money on a short term basis. Repayment is usually required within the current semester; but even at this students can be helped out of that bind which hits right now.

THE CHURCH STUDENT Loan Fund makes available a long-term program not only to BYU students but also to students at Ricks and the LDS Business College. Under this program any worthy full-time student may borrow money to help with his education and he doesn't even have to start paying it back until after he discontinues his full-time status as a college student.

This money can be used without any interest until six months after a student has discontinued his full-time status as a student. At this time a mere 3% interest is charged on the loan only owed.

THE LOAN PROGRAM wasn't set up to make money for the Church, but to help deserving students obtain that much needed education. The best investment anyone could ever make is to help prepare our young people for useful lives as citizens of this country.

The Church certainly receives our congratulations for the part they play in this worthwhile endeavor.

'You May Be Killed!'

If anything, the pedestrian-driver on campus has become worse since the editorial on the first of August. Drivers have not yet "got" the message.

Students still take their lives in their hands when they cross the streets.

Again we must state emphatically: Some one is going to get hurt in a bad accident on campus. A 175 lb. student is no match for a 2,000 lb. automobile moving at forty-five miles an hour.

Hindsight is better than foresight; but foresight is apparent. An accident is coming, as sure as the sun rises in the east, an accident will happen soon on this campus unless drivers and pedestrians change their habits.

DRIVERS MUST REALIZE that students have the right-of-way on campus. It is the students' privilege to cross the streets, but it is the drivers responsibility to see that students are protected.

STUDENTS MUST watch for drivers who have not realized that students, not automobiles have the right of way.

UNIVERSITY OFFICIALS must, we repeat, enforce the traffic rules and regulations and clamp down on both drivers and students who violate the rules.

This problem is minute in relation to the problems of the world, but it will not seem small to the student who spends weeks or months in a hospital.

Rules are not made to be broken; nor are bones.

Campus Tours Attract Tourists

BYU is fast becoming a tourist attraction.

Last school year a total of 16,000 persons took official tours of the campus, according to President Erastus L. Wilkinson.

Tours were conducted for single persons and groups up to 389. Included in the visitors have been

Boy Scout troops, families, church organizations, delegates from foreign countries, officials of other universities, parents of students, governmental dignitaries, American and foreign writers and many others.

All of the tour groups without exception have praised the beauty of the campus, according to A. Sterling Workman, chairman of campus tours and conferences. "A woman who had made a point to visit college campuses across the United States wrote to say that BYU was the most beautiful campus she had ever seen."

Strangers are always impressed by the modern new buildings against the backdrop of the mountains.

Of special interest to visitors of all ages is the planetarium atop the Eyring Physical Science Center. The instrument projects the stars, planets, sun and moon in a dome overhead and demonstrates their movements, the seasons, and other phenomena of the heavens. It is the only planetarium in the Intermountain area, and, although the room seats only 65 viewers at one time, a total of 6,845 persons saw the BYU astronomical show last year.

Campus Comment and Controversy

Reader Agrees With Supreme Court

Editor: Daily Universe,

What I am about to ask is of great concern to me. This question was precipitated in part, by Mr. Eubank's letter regarding President McKay's stance on Nixon and the recent Supreme Court decision regarding prayer in public schools.

Through what I believe to be an honest introspection of the various political forces and philosophies offered in this country, I have personally cast my lot with the liberal democrats as offering the greatest good for our nation. I voted for President Kennedy and would most likely do so again in 1964. I also am in agreement with the Supreme Court's decision regarding prayer in public schools. (I myself am a teacher).

One has every right in the world to attack my wisdom or conclusion; yet I hope people would not attack by freedom to honestly arrive at what I believe to be best.

Now, the question that I would like to put before Mr. Eubank or any other good member of the church is this: Have I sinned? I am a member of our Church. President's statements on these policies. This has been no small matter to me. If it has been stated that these statements have been made "with the Lord's aid"

BYU Has Dirty Farm

Agricultural science students at BYU have as their laboratory a 10-acre farm in Spanish Fork. This farm offers them practical experience in handling agricultural problems.

As part of the farm is used for raising dairy cattle, sheep, and chickens. Students learn how to care for the dairy animals, and tending the sheep, and studying the effects of various chemicals and farming methods on them.

AGRICULTURAL students at BYU, the farm as much as any other in the area uses state-of-the-art equipment. Dr. H. Walker, dean of the College of Biological and Agricultural Sciences, summed up the educational value this farm has for the students by saying that the students have valuable experiences in the practical process when they participate in the things they intend to do.

Products from the farm are also sold. The dairy herd is milked and furnishes milk and dairy products for the BYU community. A modern milking parlor and the latest facilities for storage and processing are part of the farm's equipment. DIRTY FARM, in addition to the facilities it now offers, is planned to expand. As the program progresses, model operations in the production of sheep, pig, and swine will be added to its operations.

This cable will provide one and two party service to the students who have previously had service from the University switchboard.

Each foot of the cable weighs over five pounds, resulting in some reels that weigh as much as 31 tons. The job of splicing requires more than a week per splice.

It will take approximately 45 days to finish work before the completed cable will be ready to use.

Golf Courses Help Game? It's Very Questionable

by Linda Netherton

People could make golf an easy and pleasant, even downright healthful game. Golfing establishments could enlarge the size of the holes, eliminate the rough, level the hills, drain the lakes and rivers. Anything in order to help a poor golfer's chances of breaking 100. But do they? Oh, No! Put a fine smooth bit of country side at the mercy of one of those tyrants and he madly scurries about with dredges, excavators, bulldozers, ditchdiggers, and dynamite. Leaving as a result, a panoramic view of something a mountain goat would avoid.

A GOLF-COURSE architect evidently feels guilty about the course if he hasn't created a new range of Alps enveloped in a primeval forest that's enveloped in sand dunes that's enveloped in...

Lakes that are capable of harboring oozing vessels are regarded as part preventative not to mention rapid rivers with a nasty, nerve-racking gurgle about them.

LOGICALLY, with these obstacles and hazards awaiting them, the players should give up

LAST YEAR'S cumulative summer enrollment was 3,919. All of the figures include only students registered for regular credit. Not counted are evening school and thousands of members of special conferences and conventions.

President Wilkinson pointed out that for a growing number of students education is becoming a year-round activity.

A special issue of the Daily Universe will be distributed Friday. The paper has been prepared by the BYU News Bureau and 17,000 copies are being sent out to students who plan to register at BYU this Fall.

Baseball Area Is Improved

BYU's baseball diamond is undergoing some facilitating this summer in order to make it one of the finest playing fields in the Intermountain area.

TWO CEMENT dugouts are currently under construction, and an additional 18-foot of fencing has been added to the diamond's backstop.

The home team dugout is 91 feet wide and 45 feet long, and the visiting team's is 91 by 38 feet long. The home team unit will include storage area for baseball gear and other playing equipment.

EACH DUGOUT will accommodate 20 players, and each will be equipped with a drinking fountain. The dugouts will be completed about September 1, officials said.

The new fencing will prevent foul balls from crossing the fence and causing damage to cars parked just outside the diamond area.

Fullmer Loses In 7th, Tiger Wins With TKO

Dick Tiger retained his middle-weight championship this week end by defeating Gene Fullmer in seven rounds. Marv Jensen, Fullmer's manager signaled the referee to stop the fight before the bell had rung for the eighth round.

IN THE SECOND round Tiger opened an inch-long cut above Fullmer's right eye. In round five the cut deepened and slowly began to swell shut.

At the end of the round Jensen and Lawrence Fullmer, Gene's father, urged him to quit. Fullmer shook his head.

ROUND SIX was more of the same. . . Fullmer retreating. Tiger lunging in with swift blows to the living boxer. In the sixth Fullmer again said no to his father's pleas to stop the fight. At the end of the seventh his right eye was only open a slit.

This time Fullmer said nothing as Jensen caught the referee's eye and motioned that it was all over.

FANS STORMED the ring to congratulate the champion. It took ten minutes to clear the ring before announcement could be made of Tiger's win.

"I never make plans after a fight, win, lose or draw," the former champion from West Jordan, Utah, said in the dressing room after the fight. "I have no plans for retiring and no plans for going on right now."

DOLORES FULLMER, Gene's wife, listened to the fight on the radio in her Utah home. Afterward she made the statement, "He was a good champion, but I think he should quit now."
